

ABSTRACT

Described is a security envelope with a barcode carrying a digital signature signed by the sender or the first mailman at the entrance point of the postal system. This system imposes non-repudiation on the sender at its location or at its drop-off point. To provide authentication
5 information, the barcode is scanned and tracked at each point from the source to the destination.